ABOUT HUMANITY IN ACTION

Humanity in Action is an educational organization dedicated to enhancing democratic values and promoting human rights. Building from a number of summer fellowship programs in Europe and the U.S., Humanity in Action seeks to create an enduring community among future leaders. Since its founding in 1998, Humanity in Action has engaged more than 1,300 outstanding students from the U.S. and Europe.

Founded in 2005, Humanity in Action France is based in Paris and designs international educational programs for decision-makers of today and tomorrow to respond to the challenges that democratic countries face as they become more diverse societies, including training on diversity issues, discrimination and equal opportunity in a historical, comparative and action-oriented perspective. In doing so, Humanity in Action France aims at educating a new generation of social innovators who will take action to build more inclusive and cohesive societies - and at promoting knowledge and dialogue among public institutions, businesses and civil society.

OUTLINE OF THE HIA SUMMER FELLOWSHIP

ABOUT THE FELLOWSHIP

The HIA France fellowship brings together twenty-two students from the US, France and Greece willing to deepen their knowledge and act on questions related to minority issues, equal opportunities and diversity in their societies. This unique fellowship specifically addresses these issues through a historical, comparative, and action-oriented perspective. The program is highly interdisciplinary, and features daily lectures and discussions with renowned academics, journalists, politicians, and activists, as well as site visits to non-profit, think-tank and community organizations, museums, and memorials. The program seeks to highlight different models of action to remedy injustice.

VISION

The objective of the Humanity in Action Fellowship is to facilitate a collective exploration of the social and political roots of discrimination, as well as to create a forum where potential solutions can be considered and discussed. The program is also intended to instill a responsibility among Humanity in Action Fellows to recognize and address the need to protect minorities and promote human rights—in their own communities and around the world. Humanity in Action uses the same methodology in all its educational programs: looking at the past to understand the present and act on the future.

APPROACH

During 5 intensive weeks, Fellows will explore the practices and theories underlying the concept of French Republicanism, and how it can accommodate cultural, ethnic and religious difference within its view of the state, the nation, law and politics. Although France is the focus of the Paris program, the scope of topics discussed is much broader and touch upon other national contexts, notably Greece. Topics include diversity in politics and the business world, the rise of populism in Europe, racism and xenophobia, hostility towards Roma groups, homophobia, and anti-muslim sentiments. The French program also addresses the history of slavery, colonialism, the Holocaust, the history of France towards its overseas territories and its impact on common representations, public discourse and policies. During the program, the fellows offer perspectives from their own countries and discuss them in a comparative setting with their international peers.

ACTION PROJECT

As a requirement for participation, Fellows commit themselves to implementing an “Action Project” in their home communities after they completed the Fellowship Program. In order to provide the fellows with the necessary skills, the French program offers skills training work-shops such as media training, debate training, and an introduction to project development, fundraising and networking.

After 3 weeks of sessions and workshops, Fellows dedicate their time on the program to research, and conduct interviews in order to come up with an innovative strategy for the project they will be implementing afterwards.

Diversity is not an official category of public policy in France. Therefore, the Fellows will encounter two types of policies dealing more or less explicitly with inequalities and aim at promoting equality between citizens or neighbourhoods. On the one hand, The Cité nationale de l'histoire de l'immigration (national centre of the history of immigration), opened in 2007 in Paris, is the only national museum dedicated to the history and cultures of immigration in France. The Fellows will then examine why France's urban planning is questioned.

The 2015 International Conference, titled “Gateway to Justice: The Hague,” will investigate the city’s unique role to shaping international values and institutions. The Hague has become the epicenter of engagement in international issues, especially in regard to peace, justice and reconciliation.

GROUP DISCUSSIONS

Group Discussions in the Program mostly take place at the end of the day, after the sessions with the speakers are over. They follow a highly participant-centered, rather than teacher-centered approach in which every Fellow will be expected to contribute actively. Lack of participation is taken seriously by the staff and will be addressed.

We will be primarily contextualizing the contributions from the speakers—clarifying the concepts they have introduced, questioning them, and thinking imaginatively about the issues they've presented. It is important to bear in mind that one idea or concept might not mean quite the same in France that it does in the US or in Greece. Thus, we ask you to approach the discussions with an open mind, aware of the “cultural lenses” with which we approach reality, trying not to jump to assumptions. For the American and Greek fellows, this is an ex-citing opportunity to gain an understanding of the French socio-political context and compare it with the models in their home countries. To assist them, we hope the French fellows will become “cultural translators” who can contextualize things and provide the necessary background to grasp the issues we will be exploring (same for the American and Greek fellows when talking about their own countries). For the French fellows, the discussions offer an opportunity to deepen their own knowledge about France and question the “received wisdom” with which they have grown up, as well as hearing about different approaches from the international fellows.

Another important goal of the discussions will be integrating the readings assigned for that day, so please make sure that you have read the articles the day before the sessions.

The discussions should be active, dynamic, intellectually challenging and rigorous, as well as a safe space to explore difficult/controversial questions. In order to achieve this, we ask that all participants: respect some basic rules of etiquette:

- Read the assigned articles in an active and critical manner and ensure that they are fresh in your mind on the day in which we'll discuss them.
- Remain active during the morning and afternoon sessions; thinking critically and taking notes/questions that can be used during the discussion.
- Finally, never be afraid to say you don't understand something or ask for clarification. The only stupid question is the one that remains unasked.

We hope the group discussions will be inspiring and empowering; it is here that a lot of the actual learning and growth will happen. The staff will be facilitating these sessions but it is you, the fellows, who are responsible to make sure they are a success.
